LOCAL PEOPLE ARE INTERESTED IN THE REPORTED CAPTURE

Of E. Walter Barnes Wanted in Chicago For Murder—Worked Crooked Check Game Here.

Local people are interested in the report that E. Walter Barnes, a much wanted Chicago murderer, who also was wanted in Janesville for passing a forged check, is in an Oklahoma prison. Under the name of C. H. King, Barnes appeared in Janesville early in December of 1909 and secured sixty dollars on a bogus check from Manager William Sullivan of the Myers hotel. He purported to be a theatrical agent for the attraction of Dore and Chausen and even made tentative arrangements with Manager Myers of the theatre for the appearance of his company here December 23. He was not heard from again until he appeared under his right name in Chicago, E. Walter Barnes, on January 20th, 1910, shot and killed his mother in law in a Chicago hotel. It was through a letter which Frank H. Gordon, now in the Oklahoma state prison on a charge of forgery, attempted to smuggle out through a trusty the police believe they have found E. Walter Barnes, alias King, wanted for the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Sorvosa, a year ago.

Mrs. Sorvosa was shot Jan. 29, 1910, and died Feb. 4 following at St. Luke's hospital and her daughter, Mrs. Alota Barnes, was wounded when Barnes attacked them in the Wychemere hotel, East Eighteenth street and Michigan Avenue.

When in the jail at Guthrie, Ok., awaiting trial on the charge of forgery, Gordon, or Barnes, gave to a trusty a letter addressed to an acquaintance in Portland, Ore., and containing a letter to J. W. Barnes, the prisoner's brother.

This letter was sent to the Oklahoma City police, and from the records of persons wanted elsewhere Superintendent Stages believed the man is the murderer wanted in Chicago.

Stages sent the letter and photographs of the prisoner here and the photographs were identified by Detective Sergeant Daniel O'Hara of the County Jail in Chicago, and by Sergeant John Quinn of the Lake street station, who went to school with Barnes.

Detective Quinn was sent last night to Oklahoma to identify the prisoner, if possible, and Detective Sergeant O'Hara will follow as soon as extradition papers can be prepared.

BASEBALL OUTLOOK SEEMS VERY GOOD

Janesville Fans Promised Good Sport With the Commercial League and Baseball for the coming season.

Baseball for the coming season promises to give all the excitement needed for Janesville fans. With the Commercial league upon its third season and the proposed inter southern Wisconsin city league showing up well to the fore there promise to be plenty of the national pastime for the local enthusiasts to enjoy.

President Thomas O. Howe of the Commercial league will call a meeting of the officers of that association in a short time and plans for the coming season will be discussed. Last season the league had five clubs and it is expected that all these will be in the field again. It is also reported that the Janesville Machine Company will also seek admittance, making it a seven team league.

The lease on the Conrad Park is still in the hands of the Y. M. C. A. directors and it is certain that the Park and Company, the Lewis Knitting Company, the Wisconsin Carriage Company, the Woolen Mills and the Y. M. C. A. will be represented. If the Janesville Machine Company and the Cotton Mills come in, efforts will be made to secure another team to make it an eight club league which would simplify the schedule problem.

Walter Dreen who is interested in forming the southern Wisconsin city league is exerting every effort to close up contracts with Stoughton, St. Atkinson, Beloit, Monroe and Watertown for the formation of a six team league, but would give the spectators good, fast snappy ball. Stoughton, St. Atkinson and Beloit have already signified their desire to go into such a compact and Monroe and Watertown are hanging fire until they see how their present contracts for games come out.

Mr. Dreen is most enthusiastic over the prospects of the proposed league and is fathering and believes that it will be a success if given proper support by the local fans. At present the plans are to have a meeting in Janesville of representatives from the six teams to discuss the plans and arrange for the schedule. At the same time a local team would be made up largely of local players but it would be necessary to secure some good pitchers and Dreen has his eye on Schmidt, late of the Koshonia team in the Lake Shore league, a good, heady, fast player, and Pete Peterson of Capron, Ill., who has made considerable of a name for himself as a twirler. It is thought both of these men could be induced to come here.

John Hall is talked of for catcher. Dreen will be at first himself; George Miller at second, "Skelly" Hill for short, and Tom Sullivan for an infield or in the sky garden. Dreen is anxious to have other local men talk with him about the league's prospects and also to have a meeting of local men to plan for the league.

Dreen has refused a contract with Madison for a try-out and also with the fast Winona team, and will devote his energies to making the local team a success if possible.

At the entertainment given in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last evening, the efforts of the Y. M. C. A. social committee were well rewarded by a crowded house. The program was better and the attendance larger than at any previous entertainment. The numbers were all of exceptional quality.

ENTERTAINED FRIENDS

AT A WASHINGTON TEA

Miss Nellie Halfhead Was Hostess to a Number of Lady Friends Wednesday Evening.

[Special to the Gazette.]

Broadhead, Feb. 24.—Miss Nellie Halfhead enjoyed the company of a number of lady friends at a Washington tea at her home on Wednesday evening.

A two-course luncheon was served. There were favors of litchins and a cherry tree graced the center of the table. It was a most pleasant event.

A. F. Coles.

The funeral of the late A. F. Coles occurred this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the M. E. church, conducted by Rev. G. N. Foster, pastor, assisted by Rev. J. Lloyd Smith of the Congregational church. The interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

Personal.

Gilbert Rinken accompanied his brother, Meinick, on his trip to Washington, South Dakota, this fore part of the week and it is said he expects to remain there.

A. F. Post has rented the tobacco farm just across the county line from the city line which has been occupied for the past two years by Martin Paulson and family. This is one of the finest tobacco farms in this section and Mr. Post is fortunate in being able to locate upon it.

THE METHOD THAT WINS

The results of my policy during the past year has proven this fact very clearly to my mind.

"That when it comes to choosing a Dentist, the great mass of people naturally turn to a man who does good work, but who places no fictitious high estimate of value upon his services.

I believe I have earned my way into the hearts of the people in a Dental way by giving the best service at moderate prices.

Try me and see for yourself.

HOT FIRE AT HARRY VAN GILDER'S HOME

Gasoline With Which He Was Cleaning Auto Caught Fire, Damaging Machine and Destroying Shed.

Touching the ignition switch on his automobile, caused a spark and set fire to the automobile and auto shed owned by Harry Van Gilder, at 509 Milton Avenue about two o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Van Gilder had been cleaning the car with gasoline and it is thought that the accidental lighting of the switch caused a spark which ignited the fumes of the cleaning fluid. The building and machine were a mass of flames in a second and a hurried call was sent for the fire department. It was the first opportunity the chief had had to use the new hose since the equipment was placed on it and it proved satisfactory, the car detaching the horses on the long Milwaukee street hill and the equipment working well. The blaze was an extremely hot one and required two streams of water besides the chemicals to put it out. Chief Klein scorching his face slightly in working about the fire. The body and tires of the car and the shed were practically destroyed. The loss is estimated at about $1200.

JANESVILLE TO GET A SUMMER SESSION?

Effort Being Made By County Superintendent to Institute a Summer School For Teachers Here.

An attempt is being made by County Supt. Antkowiak to arrange for a summer school for teachers in this city this year. He is now sending out letters to the different high school principals in the county to find out their attitude in the matter. The county Supt. has been obtaining for the use of the high school building for this purpose. The county which would last six weeks would be some what in the way of a starter for the summer for the projected training school, and would be for the purpose of giving those who contemplate teaching next year a chance to receive the professional training required by the state law.

There is some question as to the success of the plan as there are already sessions of a similar nature held in connection with the Monroe training school and the Whitewater Normal school. By these letters however, the county superintendent hopes to find out just about how many might be expected to attend and in that way decide as to the advisability of instituting such a course here. It would provide a six weeks course of study for high school graduates and others who needed that much training before they would be allowed to teach in the state.

RAILROADS LOSE BIG RATE CASES

Interstate Commerce Board Votes an Advance.

VICTORY FOR THE SHIPPERS

Lines Are Ordered to Reduce First-Class Charges While Tariffs of Second Grade Must Be Reduced.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The shippers won a sweeping victory in the western and eastern railway rate cases in decisions handed down by the interstate commerce commission.

The railroads are prohibited from advancing first-class rates and they are ordered to reduce second-class rates. The commission shows that at the moment when the railroads were arguing their justification for a raise they were eminently prosperous. The decisions were by unanimous vote of the commission.

Lane's Report is Optimistic.
The report, written by Commissioner Franklin K. Lane, is an elaborate, optimistic review of the American railway situation.

"Despite what the railroad reports say of the considerable increase in wages and the increase in the cost of fuel, the last six months of the year 1910, in which the new wage schedules were in effect, the report shows for the carriers the largest operating income they have ever enjoyed."

The report opens with a consideration of the effect of railroad regulation on the revenues of the carriers, in which it is shown that, by reason of the law and its enforcement, the railroads have been protected against each other. As a result the revenues of the carriers have increased under regulation and their dividends and their surplus have also increased as in no other period of their history. In the past ten years the railroads of the United States have borrowed over four and one-half billion dollars, or twice the amount of the national debt at the close of the Civil war.

Dividends Largely Increased.
This is evidence of the faith the public has in these properties. The rate of dividends and the total amount has increased more rapidly than the additional mileage built. The western roads have increased their surplus over 100 per cent. in ten years.

Comment is made upon the fact that the railroads are now seeking to increase rates which were voluntarily made by them under competitive conditions and which they admit could not be increased under such conditions.

The carriers are seeking to gain the benefits of protective legislation and at the same time asking for a free hand and criticizing the law for the restraints which it casts upon them. It is found that the carriers do not need larger revenue for purposes of maintaining their credit or insuring them against temporary adversity.

Constitution Protects Roads.

The report closes with these words: "The Constitution of the United States guarantees the carriers against the confiscation of their property on the taking of the same without due process of law. Without this constitutional guaranty, which is distinctively American—for here property rights are more sacredly safeguarded than in other lands of more mobile law—the railroads of our country are protected from injury of any lasting character by the popular consciousness that they are essential to the industrial life of the people. To harm these roads is to injure ourselves. Our laws do not seek to establish dominion over private capital for any other purpose than to make sure against injustice being done to the public and thereby make such capital itself more secure."

"We are dealing here with a difficult problem, involving multitudinous facts and an infinite variety of modifying conditions, which make the establishment of principles and the framing of policies a matter of slow evolution. Congress has laid down a few rules. These rules we are attempting to apply. It is not for us to say that we represent the government and may have a policy of our own which in any degree runs counter to the power granted to us or the duty imposed upon us. The railroads may not look to this tribunal to negative or modify the expressed will of the legislature. They have laid before us the facts and the law which would make for a justification of their course in the increase of rates. To our minds their justification has not been convincing."

"We shall ask the carriers to withdraw the proposed tariffs and, if such action is not taken, the commission will further suspend these rates and make an order directing the maintenance of present rates for a period of two years."

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 24.—Dr. Charles F. Aked, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church of New York, of which John D. Rockefeller is a member, has been formally called to the pastorate of the First Congregational church of this city.

JUSTICE'S PAY SMALL

HARLAN QUOTED AS SAYING HE CAN'T REPAY $1,000.

BILL OWES THAT AMOUNT BORROWED WHEN HE WAS MARRIED—UNABLE TO BUY PORTRAIT.

Washington, Feb. 24.—That Justice Harlan of the United States Supreme court has never found the profession of jurist remunerative enough to enable him to catch up on a $1,000 debt occasioned at the time of his marriage, in 1866, was the interesting statement made to the appropriations committee of the house during its hearings on the sundry civil bill, by Albert Rosenthal, a Philadelphia artist.

Mr. Rosenthal has partially completed a collection of paintings of former members of the Supreme bench and has offered the collection to congress for purchase. He was asked by a member of the committee if he had made any paintings at the personal solicitation of the justices.

"I have not been paid by any of them," said Mr. Rosenthal. "They all told me they were too poor to buy them. Justice Harlan said: 'I would like to have that portrait. I borrowed $1,000 when I was married, and every year since when I fix up my accounts for the year I find I still owe that $1,000.' They are all too poor to buy them. Justice McKenna wanted to buy the one of himself, but the price was too high."

JEWS DRIVEN FROM HOMES

Wholesale Expulsion Is Begun by Governor of Tchernigov Province—Proves Deaf to Appeals.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 24.—Governor Maklakoff has begun a widespread expulsion of the Jews from the province of Tchernigov, a government in Little Russia.

Two hundred and nineteen families in one district, including wealthy landowners and manufacturers, were marched through the heavy snow drifts to the outskirts of the district, to be conducted out of the province. A committee attempted to appeal to the governor, but he refused to see them and they have now appealed to the authorities at St. Petersburg.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

by RUTH CAMERON.

I HAVEN'T forgotten that this column is to be occasionally dedicated to telling something about unique occupations for women. I'm simply waiting for some one to tell me of unusual occupations of which you know.

In the meantime I have a suggestion along that line to make. It isn't anything that anyone I know of ever did. It's just something that I think could be done. Why couldn't some woman with an eye for clothes and fashions and some artistic sense start a "sartorial bureau"?

I don't believe one woman in ten gets anywhere near the possible value out of the money she puts into her clothes.

By "possible value" I mean the full value in attractiveness, suitability, style and wearing qualities that could be gotten out of that money by someone who really understood the art of clothes.

The business of this "sartorial bureau" would be to supply such women, advice, and when desired, actual oversight in clothes buying.

Perhaps an illustration will make my meaning plainer.

Miss H. is a stenographer who has a very good salary and who spends about $300 a year upon her clothes. That ought to purchase her a pretty wardrobe but she is a woman without that sort of sixth sense which some women have—the clothes sense—and she does not have time to study up styles and lines and colors things, and is seldom as well dressed as Miss L., who has about half as much money to spend but much more time and taste.

So Miss H. goes to the sartorial bureau. She goes at the beginning of the season and announces that she has $150 to spend on her winter wardrobe.

Now the sartorial bureau, according to my idea of it in its completeness, consists of a good executive head with a staff of women, some of whom have artistic ability, some of whom are particularly well versed in styles, and two or three who thoroughly understand materials and the art of shopping.

Miss H. is received by the executive head who plans the spending of the money in a general way. She is then handed over to the artistic woman who tells her what colors and lines she should use, and finally consults with the authority in styles who goes over fashion books with her and suggests becoming styles.

For all this advice she pays a proportion of the amount to be spent, say about four per cent.

If after this she desires the services of a shopper these are supplied at so much an hour.

Perhaps her whole bill from the bureau is seven dollars and at this expense she makes sure of a winter wardrobe infinitely more stylish, more becoming, and more thoroughly "right" than she has ever had before.

Of course I realize that such a staff could not be maintained until a large business had been built up, but I think the business could be started by a woman who had taste and a good amount of that sixth sense, and who combined to a certain extent all the necessary capabilities.

Of course the larger part of her customers would be women who had a good deal more money to spend than Miss H., but I cited her case more to show the value of such a bureau to women of even moderate means.

Is it such an impossible scheme? I wonder.

WE GROW like what we eat. But food depresses; good food exalts us like an inspiration.

Fruits in Winter Market.

The delicious pine apple is now obtained nearly all the year around. It is a fruit which contains a papain that is able to digest albuminous foods, hence it is a valuable aid to digestion.

Pine apple is especially nice with bananas, and combines with any fruit. Prunes are no longer despised, and the more expensive kinds may make a really elegant dish. Bananas are another fruit always in the market. Pigs, dates and oranges are always with us.

Many people find the banana hard to digest, but if a little care were taken to prepare them that difficulty would be overcome. Skin and scrape them carefully before eating, to remove the tough, stringy pulp, which is highly astringent. Bananas are served sliced, sprinkled with sugar and lemon juice, or with sugar and cream.

Baked in their skins, many find bananas very appetizing. Serve with a sauce of sugar, lemon juice and butter. Bananas are good in combination with an equal quantity of sliced oranges; sprinkle with sugar and serve.

Bananas With Cereal.—Slice fresh bananas into a sauce, sprinkle with sugar, cover with boiled rice or any cereal and serve with sugar and cream.

Cranberries are another wholesome fruit, reasonable in price and good to serve as a sauce or as an accompaniment to meat. When using them for pie, a way that is not common, is to use two crusts and cut up the berries or cut them in halves, adding the amount of sugar needed and bake as any fruit pie. If it seems to be liable to boil out and lose the juice, insert a paper funnel in the opening of the pie. The juice will boil up in the funnel and not then be wasted.

Quinces are another popular winter fruit. The quince must be cooked to be palatable.

For Baked Quinces, core and wipe carefully. Fill the cavities with sugar and bake in a slow oven several hours, basting with butter and lemon juice.

Fads and Fashions

FADS AND FASHIONS.

New York, Feb. 24.—During the past few seasons fashion has brought many old and foolish things, some even of appalling ugliness, but these caricatures were to be found almost exclusively in French fashion papers and in the display windows of certain shops catering to women eager for notoriety.

Women of taste and refinement kept aloof from the most extreme styles and in really good society freakish and outre styles are everywhere tabooed. Aside from these extreme vagaries, present modes offer many picturesque and charming elements.

The fashionable figure is more supple than it once was. That is something to be truly thankful for. The stout woman stiffly boarded up in straight front corsets, which make of her figure something with little resemblance to nature's original design is still to be seen, but she is not in the fashion so far as figure is concerned and the expert makers are gradually changing their ideals and methods and gradually forcing the change upon their customers. Women are still to be of the straight front type, but they are not to slope backward.

The front line is really to be straight and the waist is to have very nearly if not quite, its natural size, which decreases the emphasis of the hip curves, and the hips—well, one does away with their redundancy if possible. If not, one does all one can to diminish their apparent size. An artist connoisseur can accomplish much in this direction. The bust should be rather high and not very full, and the general impression given throughout the whole figure should be that of ease and freedom, a rest which may be obtained through unimpaired curves or elastic waists in the corsets and clever corset lines without going to the extreme of eliminating the corset altogether. As a matter of fact the modish figure is surely natural, though some of the clothes draped over it distort it and make it seem absurd and the woman who can't or won't reduce her hips will find the prescribed lines trying.

The dressmakers already have, in hand quantities of one-piece frothing frocks in silk which will give service under coats now if needed, and will be ready for warm spring days. Some of those are in figured foulards, but the best looking so far seem to be in the plain dark silks of the crepe or dull satin order. A smart little black frock of this kind, finished at the throat with only a little detachable collar of net lace or lingerie, showing above the black or made with a Dutch or other turndown collar, and a general air of tailored simplicity, will be an exceedingly practical and comfortable asset for spring and summer, and a coat to match will make the frock still more useful. There are many coats and skirts of black satin or satin crepe in making too, with a fair sprinkling of similar suits in very dark blues and browns.

The black and white models multiply so that the combination bids fair to be as popular in the spring and summer as it has been during the winter, only in most of the summer frocks the white naturally predominates, the black being the relieving color, while in winter frocks the order was reversed. Some of the prettiest things of this kind are in fine white cotton voile or marquisette effectively embroidered in black, but there are simple French lawn and linen tub frocks whose note of black is cleverly introduced through the use of white and black materials as trimmings.

Never were the inexpensive cotton stuffs prettier and there are innumerable models both charming and simple. Each year brings better values in the tub frock of this type and there are makers who specialize in well made by severely simple frocks of gingham, dimity, lawn, high, etc., at very reasonable prices.

The new dresses deserve special mention, for in color and design they are prettier than they ever were before. The same may be said of the gingham and even the percale suit, regarded as practical and serviceable rather than elite have taken such distinctness of color and design that they make most desirable summer frocks for hard wear.

White serge is as popular as ever. Every year, when the Southern season comes around this material soon begins to assume an importance which it retains until late in the autumn, and indeed, in some cases through the entire year. The manufacturers have various names for the many fancy weaves of soft white wool, but the general public is prone to lump them all under the name of serge, excepting only a few distinct weaves.

There are innumerable effective weaves in white wool among the new materials. Every imaginable change is rung upon diagonals and herringbone stripes and basket weaves and house woven homespun effects, and the very fine soft twills are popular too, particularly in connection with the simple one-piece frocks for which the heavier and richer weaves are a little heavy. Still lighter than the light serges are the white woolsens of the voile and etamine and marquisette family, eminently practical for summer frocks, and as a rule looking less easily than the serges but never achieving quite the smartness of the latter where tailored effects are concerned.

In many of the models that plaits are introduced to give freedom of movement without altering the straightness of line. An idea exploited in several good designs is the introduction of a box plait or inverted box plait or several plaits at each side of the skirt. This plait or group of plaits starts below the smooth plain hip section and is headed by a big embroidered patch pocket or applied piece resembling a patch pocket. Embroidery similar to that on these skirts appears around the neck and on the peasant sleeves.

Next to navy blue, which is the color for smart tailored suits in Paris now, gray in all the shades from silvery smoke to gun metal promises to be much used. There is a light neutral gray which is particularly attractive for spring wear. It is cool in suggestion, does not show the dust and looks especially well with shades of violet or green in millinery. But while all shades of blue are satisfactory in street suits gray must be chosen with caution. Some grays fade badly; others are trying to the complexion, and only a few have a smart look when built in severe, tailored style.

White pleated lawn blouses with trimmings of Cluny or Irish lace are always neat and correct, and this year there are a multitude of dainty colored neckbows variously knotted that make the neck look smart and trim. The Roumanian coat will shortly be all the rage. It is without sleeves and is made in white cloth, with either the black band or else a double strip of white and black edging it all around. It is simple yet chic, and is slipped over thin blouses when the air is a little chilly.

Evening, dinner and theatre gowns of silk brocade have a border on the skirt like a band, in which bands, gold threads and silk embroidery are interwoven, the low peasant waist having a bib-like piece of the same and short kimono sleeves.

Tuques of brocade with puffed crowns of plain satin are good for the early spring days. These are trimmed with small alpacas at one side. If this empire is not used a high plume is used.

DAILY DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist

90 PER CENT. OF DISEASE DUE TO WRONG DIET.

"The longer we are engaged in the practice of medicine," says the "Lancet-Clinic," "the more we come to realize the truth of Dr. Halg's conclusion, that probably 90 per cent. of disease can be traced to avoidable errors in diet. It seldom occurs to most of us that food is the most potent factor in the causation of disease." All scientific practice is now based on the principle that cure must consist in the removal of the cause, and therefore dietetic treatment must come to have the most prominent place in cure. This is not ignoring the importance of the mental factor nor of the other physiological factors in cure. The importance of the mental influence has perhaps been overestimated in failing to recognize the influence of the diet upon thought, for it is largely true that, as a man eateth so he thinketh.

Only Real Need for Competence. The pursuit of wealth is not the aim and end of existence. For whether it be laborer at his bench or the managing director at his desk, the accumulation of a competence is only desirable in that it allows each to enjoy his life in his own way.

ONE BIG FOOL

But He Doesn't Live in Janesville Nor Read The Gazette.

A man in Connecticut gave a doctor, a specialist in catarrh, $50 to cure him of this common yet most obnoxious disease.

The specialist gave him a bottle of medicine and told him to use it. The fool took the medicine home, took one dose, put it on a shelf and made no further effort to follow instructions.

Three months later with the medicine still on the shelf he told a friend that the specialist was a fake; that he had paid him $50 and still had catarrh.

HYOMEL (pronounced it High-o-mel) won't cure catarrh if you don't breathe it; it will if you breathe it regularly.

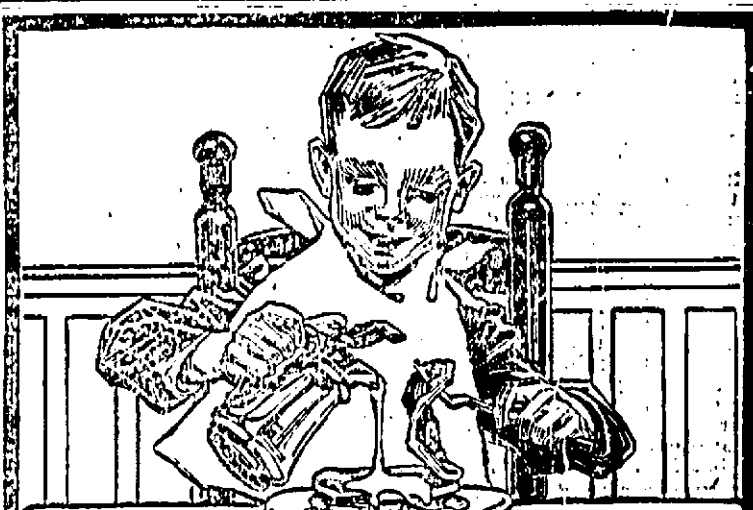

Furthermore, you don't need to give a catarrh specialist $50 to cure you of catarrh, for the specialist is yet to be born who can write a better prescription than HYOMEL.

The People's Drug Co. and druggists everywhere guarantee HYOMEL to cure catarrh or money back. A complete outfit which consists of a bottle of HYOMEL, a hard rubber inhaler and simple instructions for use costs only $1.00. Separate bottle of HYOMEL if afterwards needed cost but 50 cents.

WOMAN'S BIRTHRIGHT.

Every woman wield an influence for good or evil. This is her birthright as a woman. Men are moulded by her with far more frequency than she suspects. Men may be guided to a certain extent by the opinions of their fellows, but it is the opinion of some woman that finally makes them follow a given line of action.

Naturally, the average man doesn't like to acknowledge this, but it is true nevertheless. A good woman can make almost anything she desires out of almost any kind of a man. Her influence is greater with him than anything else in the world. A man may "go to the dogs," but let some good woman get hold of him and he will be as good as new. Men are moulded by her with far more frequency than she suspects. Men may be guided to a certain extent by the opinions of their fellows, but it is the opinion of some woman that finally makes them follow a given line of action.

Most people in this world who go wrong are just like the parched flowers. They wilt and shrivel not because they have not had it in them to do better, but because circumstances have stunted their ambitions, spoiled their aspirations and all but ended their growth. Let some gentle and soothing influence take hold of them and see how they will revive.

Of course there are people who cannot be made to recover from their networks, just as there are flowers which when stricken by chilly winds or parching sun cannot be made to again look up or to take on healthy growth.

If women could only be made to realize the full extent of their influence they would not so often be careless with it. They would conserve it as the most precious thing they possessed, to be used as an ointment in dabaster boxes for those in sore need.

If a good woman can make a man look up and seek to regain his place in the world, a bad woman can destroy the best of men once she gets hold of him, and it is queer how seemingly strong men will fall under the influence of some shrew who has never been for a moment worthy the consideration of any one who had any sort of decent aspiration in life.

If girls knew the influence they have upon the lives of the young men who come within the circles of their acquaintance they would not so often be flippant upon things of the utmost importance. They would not treat with levity and poor judgment things that should be held in the highest respect. Frequently, the disapproval of some good girl saves a young man from starting on the road that means ruin. The girl who never sees any harm in the small vices of life, who can laugh at a drunken man—who can see a man reeling through the street without feeling pity for his weakness—is on the wrong track as far as her good influence she may exert over others is concerned.

Many a man dates his success in life from the moment his heroine acquainted with some girl who was broad enough to see that having a so-

FARMERS' INSTITUTE WAS WELL ATTENDED

Gathering at Shopers Under Auspices of Moonlight Club Was Most Successful Event.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Town Line Hotel and Rock, Feb. 23.—The Farmers' Institute held at Shopers, Feb. 23, under the auspices of the Moonlight Club, was highly successful in its execution of program, in attendance and attention of audience, and in every way was highly satisfactory to those who have put forth much effort to make this meeting a success.

The afternoon session was called to order at one o'clock by C. W. Shilwell of Turin, presiding officer. Rev. Joseph H. Bannister of Shopers delivered the address of welcome in a very cordial and at the same time practical manner. He urged the necessity of doing our best in all lines of work, showing that the farmer should make an equal progress in his work, in that "God will bring his competition."

Mr. J. H. Jones of Clinton responded to the address of welcome, congratulating the people of the locality on their good sense in getting together to discuss public matters and endeavoring to better their conditions. H. A. Moehle of Clinton followed on the subject of "The Community and the School." He also spoke of the necessity of the people coming together to discuss subjects of common interest; that the schools should have the cooperation of the community and should have our strongest backing; that the farmer should be educated in the lines of his work. He spoke of the value of manual training in the schools, and also dealt briefly on the characteristics of the teacher.

Supt. C. L. Antkowiak discussed the subject of Mr. Moehle's speech, heartily endorsing his sentiments. One of the points which he brought out was that we are interested in the schools because our children are in them. He also emphasized the value of true agricultural education.

C. E. Moore, chairman of the town board of Magnolia and chairman of the county roads committee, had for his subject, "Does It Pay to Build Good Roads?" Mr. Moore spoke of the general characteristics of good roads, the purposes for which they are built. Good roads give good school facilities and those lead to a greater prosperity, he said. A system of good roads, he considered, was just as much a need as a network system of railroads. Mr. Moore's address was a plea for good roads rather than how to build them.

H. J. Jones, county commissioner of highways, made a splendid plea for good roads, fortifying his statements with figures and facts. Good roads, he contended, made a rural home as desirable as a city one. He gave much valuable information in regard to the cost of roads.

Judge C. D. Rosa of Beloit, the next speaker, had for his subject, "The Keeping Up of a Dairy Herd." He gave a practical table showing comparative results in milk flavor and financial returns also showing the cost of feed of all kinds and the excess of returns over cost of feed, or the opposite. He maintained that farmers should consider the difference in individual cows in a dairy. C. F. Lathrop of the town of Turtle ably discussed the above address.

Mr. W. J. Bannister of the town of Turtle had for his subject one of much interest at the present time: "What the Tuberculin Test Means to the Dairy Farmer." He considered tuberculin testing of the herd one of the necessities of the age, self-preservation being one of the great laws of nature. The development of tuberculosis was skillfully traced to food, fresh air and rest. He maintained that it does not pay to cure the cow with the disease. The test, which is not always correct, is the best diagnosis for the disease and is the only practical solution. The test must be applied properly and regularly.

Dr. Bannister's address was followed by a closely by his hearers and was one of the best of the afternoon. The seating capacity of the hall was taxed to its utmost capacity until the close of the afternoon program at 5 o'clock. Supper was served to a large number from 5:30 until 7 o'clock by the R. N. A. of Shopers.

The evening session, presided over by J. T. Atkinson of Shopers, opened promptly at 8 o'clock. The hall was filled to overflowing, many standing, by an audience that listened with keen interest to a two hours' program which consisted of songs and recitations by the state graded school of Shopers and from the Dist. No. 6 school, La Prairie and Turtle. Vocal and instrumental music was given by local talent. Songs of those taking part were: H. E. Overton, Verne Truesdell, Ida Brown, Florenz Cox, Hazel Tuttle, the Miesek Lathers, and Mrs. Lottie.

The principal address was given by Prof. John Van Pelt of the manual training department of the Beloit city schools, his subject being, "Manual Training in the Public Schools." He used exhibits in his talk which was a very interesting one to all. At the close of the meeting it was voted, unanimously, to continue the work of the Moonlight Club next season. This was the closing meeting of this year's work, which has been one of the most successful years since the organization of the club, six years ago.

ANNIVERSARY OF DU LAC GRANGE

Meeting of Milton Grange on February 22 Was Celebration of Thirty-eighth Anniversary.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milton, Feb. 23.—Du Lac Grange No. 12 held their regular semi-monthly meeting in I. O. O. F. hall, Milton, on February 22. This was their 38th anniversary meeting. Du Lac Grange having been organized Feb. 18, 1873 at Milton Junction.

A history of this Grange, prepared by Mrs. J. C. Carr, was read by Mrs. J. M. Marquart. It showed that but a few of the original members were now alive, and while, like all other organizations, this Grange has had its ups and downs, it has always been a live working institution, and at present has a good membership. Nearly forty were present at the meeting, five of whom were charter members thirty-eight years ago.

But few people realize the influence the Grange has had in our nation during the past forty years. It is claimed that the first resolution presented to members of congress asking for a system of free rural delivery of mail was passed by Du Lac Grange. Many other questions of public interest have been, from time to time, discussed at their meetings and passed along through the county, state and national Granges, some of which have been enacted into laws and others are still being agitated, such as postal savings banks, parcel post, election of United States senators and other federal officers by direct vote of the people. The present pure food and civil service laws owe much to the Grange for their existence on our statute books.

While it seems that in this part of the country the Grange was going backward, taking the country as a whole, it never was stronger in numbers and influence.

Advertising That Paid.

We have been arguing for a long time that advertising paid. Here a few months ago one of the boys in the office lost a pen, necktie, jacket, or it might have been a diamond stud. Anyway, he inserted an ad. in this paper and let it run several times, and here the other day, during the Christmas clearing up, he found it in the office—Dorhan (Ala.) Eagle.

Ammonia for Heart.

Spirits of ammonia is undoubtedly of great value in cases of heart or nerve exhaustion, and a few drops in a glassful of cold water is a great tonic. It is not one that should be taken without the advice of a physician, however, for it is capable of injuring the heart.

For the Thin and Bloodless!

The thin and bloodless, with pale cheeks, white lips and frail angular physique, of this community have been much interested in the reports of physicians and others concerning the effectiveness of the treatment for increasing the red and white corpuscles of the blood, thus adding color and weight with its accompanying vigor to the depleted system. A path or from ten to thirty pounds is not at all unusual where the treatment is regularly used for several months, while the color improves almost from the beginning. Most good applications of this remedy is in the form of chocolate capsules, put up in sealed packets, with directions for home use. Its action aids assimilation and absorption of the food eaten very promptly.

REC DISEASES.

The lower orders of animal life as well as man are subject to disease, and germs seem usually responsible for their troubles as well as ours. The very name "insect" means insect and refers to the smallness of the creatures that are included in that class. Yet germs are smaller than they are and active in injuring and destroying them. The bee has his particular enemy in a specific germ, which is not known to bring harm to any other insects. Even wasps and ants are immune to this foe. Its custom is to attack the bees in the larva stage, usually preventing development therefrom. When once it attacks a bee colony it frequently exterminates it.

Beeskeepers in certain districts are even now preparing for an expected

But the raising of honey is a larger business than many suppose, amounting to $200,000,000 annually, and the diseases referred to are causing a loss of from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 each year.

"You can't quit like to the occasion, can you, Howard?" asked the boss. "You'd like to be good, of course, but you want to be cocksure beforehand that it isn't going to cost too much."

"I'm only asking for a little time in which to consider it," was the view president's final word.

"You have all the time there is between now and election. I've told you what I am going to do."

"You know very well that we can't allow you to do what you propose. With an unfriendly attorney general we might as well go out of business first as last."

"It is up to you, McVicker," was the calm reply.

CHAPTER III.

A FATAL GALLON OF MEMORIES.

As a churchly fate decreed it turned out that Mount was not to have Gantry for a travelling companion beyond Chicago.

On the second day of westward faring the railroad man, whose business followed him wherever he went, had instructions to meet Mr. Howard McVicker, his vice president, in the Illinois metropolis, and on the morning of the following day Mount continued his journey alone.

Twenty-four hours later the expatriated westerner had crossed his tribulation, otherwise the clay colored stream of the Missouri river, at Omaha, and had entered upon scenes which ought to have been familiar—should have been and were not, so many and great were the changes wrought during his fourteen years of absence. In the smoking car he felt into talk with a prosperous looking man whose thin, hawklike face was so out of keeping with the air of prosperity—a lone passenger who had boarded the train at Omaha.

At first their conversation was baldly desultory. The hawk faced one, it seemed, was a mine owner whose property, vaguely located somewhere "in the mountains," was involved in litigation. It was the reference to the litigation which first drew Mount beyond the commonplace, the awakened interest being wholly professional.

Oddly enough, since he had never expected to use it, he had specialized somewhat in mining law, and before many miles had been clicked off under the drumming trucks of the Pullman he found himself giving opinions and laying down plans of procedure for the man who, investing in mines, had apparently purchased more trouble than profits.

Into the cleft thus opened by the ax of business the hawk faced man inserted a wedge of cautious inquiry. In addition to his mining properties, he had been making investments in timberlands—bad investments, he feared, since the government had lately taken such a decided stand against the cutting of timber in the new forest reserves.

Again Mount was good naturedly helpful. One of his classmates in the law school had been preparing himself to enter the legal branch of the forest service, and Mount had acquired at second hand a working knowledge of the forestry situation in the west and of the legal status of the western timber tracts. Moreover, he had very clear and decided opinions upon the question of the conservation of the nation's timber resources, and he was frank enough to express them emphatically.

If he had been less unapproachable he might have remarked the quickened attention of the prosperous looking person who seemed so willing to take advice from a chance acquaintance.

"If you were a government man yourself you could hardly put the case stronger," was the smiling commentary of this person, who was as yet nameless to Mount.

"How do you know I am not a government man?" said the expatriate, willing enough to play the game as the cards should fall.

"Because you are not traveling on government transportation," was the shrewd reply.

"You can't tell anything by that," Mount said, laughing. "A good many

"I know they do," admitted the other, and then, with a sharp side glance which Mount missed, "especially if they are traveling on a secret mission."

"You needn't be alarmed. You have not told me anything the government could make use of," returned Mount, carrying the just one necessary move further along.

It was precisely at this point, as Mount remembered afterward, that the forestry subject was dropped. Later on, after the talk had drifted back to mining and from mining into politics, the hawk faced man announced his intention of going back to his section in the body of the car to take a nap.

A little further along toward evening the great range which had been visible for hours in the west began to define itself in peaks and high, bald shoulders of wind swept mesas, and Mount was glad to find some strings of the homecoming wanderer's quickened pulse answering to the nearer view of the mountains.

At the dining car dinner, which was served while the high peaks of the main range were still reflecting the crimson and gold of the sunset, Mount missed his luncheon companion.

Now that he recalled it he remembered that he had seen nothing of the hawk faced man since the early afternoon. But the absence of companionship was a relief rather than a deprivation.

Almost without knowing it he found himself hastening through his dinner so that he might return to the Pullman window. When at length he had the longed for sight of a bunch of cattle, with the solitary night herd hanging by one leg in the saddle to watch the passing train, the call of the west was once more trumpeting in his ears.

At a small timber shipping station well within the mountains where the logs were shot down to the mills in a trough-like water chute from the wooded heights twenty miles distant there was a longer stop than usual, and Mount got out to make inquiries.

There was a freight wreck at some point a few miles farther west, and the train would probably be delayed for several hours.

By this time Mount was on well remembered ground. Forty miles away in a direction somewhat east of north lay the Mount home domain, where he had spent his happy boyhood. An hour's gallop to the westward the level rays of the setting sun would be playing upon the little station of Painted Hat, which had been the shipping point for the home ranch. And halfway between Painted Hat and the Circle Bar lay the horse corral of one Debbelby, a hermit of the mountains and the boy Evan's earliest schoolmaster in the great book of nature.

Since Mount could not go on by train, what was to prevent the taking of an immediate and delightful plunge into the land of heart stirring recollections?

Arranging with the Pullman conductor to have his hand baggage left in Gantry's office at the capital, Mount crossed quickly to a lively stable opposite the station, bargained for a saddle horse, borrowed a poncho and a pair of leggings and presently, with the squeak of the saddle leather making sweet music in his ears, and broken violently for the moment at least, with all the civilized traditions.

He would go to see Debbelby; drop in upon the old ranchman without warning and thus get his first taste of the homelike unaltered with any of the disappointing changes which were doubtless awaiting him at the real journey's end.

Now, it chanced that the lively stable was an adjunct to the single hotel in the small sawmill town, and as Mount swung up into the saddle he was a little surprised to see his companion of the Pullman smoking compartment standing on the porch of the hotel in earnest talk with three others who from their appearance might have figured either as "timber jacks" or cowboys.

Mount was on the point of speaking when he rode past the porch on his way to the northward trail pointed out by the liverman, but a curious feeling restrained him.

He was almost sure that the prosperous looking gentleman with the bird of prey eyes was making him the subject of his earnest talk with the three men of doubtful occupation.

Quite naturally this impression deepened into a conviction when he looked back from the road crossing of the railroad track and saw that all four of the men on the porch were watching him.

After leaving the railroad Mount found himself crossing the broad mesa, with the eastern mountains near at hand, and the Lost River range struck out sharply in its sky line against the sunset horizon.

On this mesa the trail disappeared entirely, but so long as he was sure of the general direction Mount let it go and gave the tireless little broncho a loose rein. Debbelby's ranch lay among the foothills of the distant western range, and he was quite sure that he could ride straight to it in the dark if need be.

It was some little time after he had left the shoulders of the eastern range behind that a curious thing happened.

Far away to the right he heard the sound of galloping hoofs. Though the moon was nearly at its full and the treeless landscape was bare of any kind of cover, he could not see the horseman who was evidently pursuing him and going in the same direction.

At first he thought it was some one who was making a detour to avoid him. Then he smiled at the absurdity of the thought and concluded that he himself was off the trail.

This conclusion was confirmed a little later when two other travelers, announcing themselves to the car as the first one had done and also, like the first, invisible to the sharpest eye except of the brown plain, passed him at speed.

"SPECIALLY IF THEY ARE TRAVELING ON A SECRET MISSION," civilian employees of the government travel on regular tickets like other people."

After that he had the solitude and immensities to himself, and it was not until the broad mesa had been crossed and the broncho was picking its way among the hogback hills of the western range that the boyish thing he had been led to do took shape as a venture which might have disconcerting consequences, for after the broncho had wandered through many canyons and had climbed a good half score of the hogback hills the young man from the east reluctantly admitted that the boyhood memories were altogether at fault in the deceptive moonlight. He was very thoroughly and unmistakably lost.

CHAPTER IV.

THE MOUNTAINS.

WHEN the three men who had pulled him from his horse and bound him had withdrawn to the farther side of the campfire to wrangle noisily over what should be done with him, Mount found it difficult to realize that they were actually discussing, as one of the expedients, the propriety of knocking him on the head and flinging his body into the canyon.

The difficulty lay in the crude incredulity of things. Five minutes earlier he had been riding peacefully up the trail, wondering how badly he was lost, and how much farther it was to Debbelby's. Then, at a sudden turn in the canyon ridge path, he had come upon a campfire and had found himself looking into the muzzle of a leveled Winchester.

From that to the unhorrible and the blinding was but a rough and tumble half minute, since he was unarmed and the surprise had been complete, but the incredulities remained.

That some ridiculous mistake had been made seemed to be the only possible explanation. But when he remembered the three invisible horsemen who had passed him on the broad mesa he was not so sure about the mistake.

Most naturally his thoughts went back to the little episode on the hotel porch. The passing glance he had given to the three men with whom his smoking room companion had been talking did not enable him to identify them with the three who were calmly discussing his fate at the nearby fire, but the conclusion was fairly obvious none the less.

Thus far he had been either too busy or too bewildered to think of asking questions, but when the more murderous of the expedients seemed actually about to prevail he thought it was time to try to find out why he was to be executed.

"I don't want to seem to interfere with any arrangements you gentlemen are making," he called across to the group at the fire, "but if you will kindly tell me why you think it necessary to murder me I should be immensely obliged."

"You know mighty good and well why there's one too many of you on Lost River just at this stage of the game," said the hard faced brigand who had held the Winchester while his two accomplices had unhoisted and bound the victim.

"But I don't," insisted Mount good naturedly. "So far as I know, there is only one of me—on Lost River or anywhere else."

"That'll do for you. It ain't your put in, now, was the gruff decision of the court."

But Mount was too good a lawyer to be silenced that easily.

"Perhaps you might not especially regret killing the wrong man, but in the present case I am very sure I should."

"The boss knows who you are, and that's enough for us," said the spokesman of the three henchmen.

"The boss?" questioned Mount.

"Yess; I said the boss. Now hold your jaw."

Mount caught at the word. In a flash the conversation with Gantry flicked into his mind.

"There is only one boss in this state," he said coolly, "and I am very sure he has not given you orders to kill me."

"What's that?" demanded the spokesman.

Mount repeated his bit of information, adding, "Perhaps you'd better ring for a better connection and ask your boss if he wants you to kill the son of his boss?"

At this the tall man came and stood over his prisoner.

"Say, comrade, it ain't my night for kidding, and it hadn't ort to be yours," he remarked grimly. "The boss didn't say you was to be rubbed out—they never do. But I reckon it would save a heap of trouble if you was rubbed out. You don't got over into them woods on Upper Lost creek with no papers to serve on anybody. See?"

A great light dawned upon Mount, and with it came the discomforting chill of a conviction overthrown. As a theorist he had always scoffed at the idea that corporations, which are creatures of the law, could afford to be open lawbreakers. But here was a very striking refutation of the charitable assumption.

The smoking room companion of the Pullman car was doubtless one of the timber pillagers who had been cutting on the public domain. To such a man an agent of the national forest service was an enemy to be disposed of as expeditiously as possible, and Mount saw that he had only himself to blame, since he had allowed the man to believe that he was a government employee.

Christ in Office of King

By Rev. Robert McHugh Morris
Pastor of First Presbyterian Church
Evansville, Ill.

TEXT—For thus shall he richly supplied unto you an entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.—II Peter 1, 11.

The risen Savior executes three offices. He is our prophet revealing to us by his word and spirit the will of God for our salvation. He is our priest, offering up of himself a sacrifice to satisfy divine justice and reconcile us to God, and in making continual intercession for us. He is our king. In his kingly office he subdues us to himself; he rules and defends us; he restrains and conquers all his and our enemies.

That we may search ourselves and see first if we are citizens of his kingdom, and second, how loyal we are to that kingdom, let us note what are the conditions of citizenship. We shall find these conditions by references which originate in the king as he stands in his relation to us, and in this manner be able to show what is our religion toward him.

The first phrase which we are taught as setting forth the manner of Christ's execution of the office of kingship toward us is that he subdues us to himself. We talk much of Christ subduing the world. We pray, sometimes halfheartedly and sometimes with great meaning, that his kingdom may come, that he will may be done in earth as it is in heaven. We congratulate before our mind's eye the lawbreakers, the flagrant sinners of the world. We draw melodramatic pictures of the thief, the drunkard, the roving, the murderer being subdued to the will of Christ.

There is something about the midnight mission which appeals to our dramatic sense. We love to dwell upon the rescuing of the perishing; we love to sing about throwing out the lifeline; we love to talk about the gospel being preached in all foreign lands. We swell with pride when we hear how China and Japan are being enlightened by his light. We are ready to shout and say, "That is good, fine, let it go on. The time will soon come when the earth is as full of the knowledge of the Lord as waters cover the seas."

Now friends, that's all objective and external. It's all good; but the first thing anyone should see to when he prays that God's will be done in earth as it is done in heaven is that he himself be subdued to Christ. There are church members who will work for others and give money to missions, and both these things they should do; but who unfortunately stop just at that point and do not permit themselves to be subdued.

The first question for you and me to say is, "Has Christ subdued us unto himself?" Do you know there was and is a profound psychological and spiritual reason or meaning behind the "mourner's bench" of our Methodist brethren. We like the phrase, "mourner's bench." There may be better ones. Perhaps the idea would be better expressed if we said, "The self-abnegating bench," the place where men are willing to say, "I surrender myself." Not "I surrender five hours a week to the work of the church;" not "I surrender one hundred dollars a year to carry on my work;" not "I surrender a nominal allegiance to the kingdom, and am glad that the kingdom is spreading;" not that I surrender my name to the roll of some church and condescend to let my greatness reflect credit and glory upon the church of Christ. But that I surrender myself, that I surrender my will which is the same as saying that I am subdued.

Brethren, the first condition of entrance into this kingdom is not registering our names on the church rolls, or on the charity lists, or on the workers' tablets, good though those things may be; but the first element is being subdued to the king.

The second thing is that when we are subdued he rules and defends us. Now the rulership of Christ is not a hard rule. He is not a despicable and unfeeling tyrant. "My yoke," he said, "is easy and my burden is light." It is necessary for us to bear the burden, the yoke must needs be worn. But the burden cannot crush us and the yoke does not gail when we are subdued to his will.

If we are subdued his ruling will seem mild and gentle. It will not be arbitrary; it will not be merely that he might crush us beyond all hope of insurrection. He does not restrain from traitorous acts so much by threats of dire punishment as by showing us the pain it will cause his heart.

We all want the defense of the government. We walk these streets at night with a feeling of greater or less security, because we feel that the government of the city, through its police, is defending us.

So it is in this kingdom of Christ. It is only while we are under the rulership of the king that he can defend us.

Now the third and last thing involved in this execution of the office of kingship is that Christ restrains and conquers all his enemies, who are our enemies as well. Notice how this comes merging quietly out of our last thought. For to revert to our illustration: While we are loyal citizens of the city, the lawbreakers are the common enemy of the city and of ourselves. But when we have outlawed ourselves then we have become an enemy to the city.
